

The Treachery Mind

Adultery, Neglect, Abandonment, Robbery, Cursing — and Dishonoring Parents
Topics 666 / Principality of Treachery Against Others

Scope: Adultery (#188 Whoredom; #251 Treachery), Neglect (#254), Abandonment (#255), Robbery (#256), Cursing (#257), Dishonoring (#258).

Shared fruit: Division and Relational Destruction under the Principality of Treachery Against Others.

Question: What mind must the adulterer hold against God to justify these acts? How do Neglect and Abandonment differ? How does this connect to dishonoring parents when children rob or curse — even after Biblical upbringing?

I. The Mind of the Adulterer — Against God, Able to Justify Everything Else

In the Topics material, adultery appears twice — and both readings matter:

Entry	Roots	Fruit / Principality
#188 (Whoredom)	addiction/bondage + control/rebellion	Sexual Corruption → Whoredom
#251 (Treachery cluster)	addiction/bondage	Division and Relational Destruction → Treachery Against Others

Adultery is not merely “a slip.” It is a mind that has already relocated lordship: from covenant under God to appetite + autonomy.

That mind, to remain against God and continue sinning, must become a self-justifying treachery-mind. It typically holds these convictions (often unspoken):

1. “My covenant is negotiable.” Marriage is treated as conditional on feeling, gain, or control — not as bound before God. Once that is accepted, neglect, abandonment, robbery, and cursing are no longer unthinkable; they are downstream.
2. “I am entitled to take what I want.” Adultery is theft of body, trust, and honor. The same entitlement fuels robbery (covetousness/materialism) and cursing (bitterness when blocked).
3. “Presence without faithfulness counts as love.” That is the bridge to neglect: remain in the role, exit the duty.

4. “When cost rises, I may exit entirely.” That is abandonment: not failure to feed — failure to remain in the bond God joined.
5. “God’s law applies to others, not to my exception.” Control/rebellion root: I am above the terms I still preach.
6. “Words don’t bind me; only my appetite does.” Vows mean nothing; speech becomes weapon or cover.

Under Principality of Treachery Against Others, adultery sits in one row with neglect, abandonment, robbery, cursing, and dishonoring. Same parent. Same fruit: Division and Relational Destruction.

The adulterer’s mind is not merely “weak.” It is treacherous: trained to break covenants while narrating innocence — and once treachery is seated, every other act in that list becomes morally available.

II. Neglect vs. Abandonment — The Difference

Both are #254 and #255, sharing roots of loneliness and emotional brokenness, the same fruit (Division and Relational Destruction), and the same principality (Treachery Against Others). They are siblings, not duplicates.

	Neglect	Abandonment
Posture	Still there , but faithless	Gone — presence or covenant withdrawn
Action	Withholds care, discipline, provision, attention, truth	Leaves the relationship, duty, or field
Biblical shape	Eli: sons honored above God; failed to restrain (1 Sam 2:29–30; 3:13)	Parent who walks away; covenant vacated
Deception	“I’m still your husband/father/mother.”	“I owe you nothing now.”
Wound produced	Presence without safety — love feels empty	Absence without closure — bonds feel disposable

Neglect starves while occupying the chair.

Abandonment vacates the chair.

The chart also lists abandoning of the family by the father or mother under Rebellion (deception/falsehood root) — abandonment as active rebellion, not passive drift. Neglect can look respectable; abandonment often exposes the treachery neglect concealed.

III. Dishonoring Parents When Children Rob or Curse

Dishonoring (#258) carries root pride and self-exaltation — same Treachery cluster, immediately after cursing in the list.

A. Faithful parents, treacherous children — still possible

Biblical upbringing does not mechanically prevent robbery or cursing. Scripture gives clear cases:

- Eli instructed Israel; his sons were corrupt (1 Sam 2:22–25).
- Samuel was faithful; his sons took bribes and perverted justice (1 Sam 8:3).

The child's robbery (covetousness) and cursing (bitterness) are their treachery — not automatic proof the parents failed to teach. Each soul chooses its lord.

A child can dishonor parents while parents honored God. That is the child's pride, not necessarily the parents' neglect.

B. Adultery → neglect → abandonment opens the same door in the house

When the adulterer's mind runs the home, children inherit more than doctrine:

Parent's treachery	What the child learns (atmosphere, not lesson)
Adultery	Covenants are breakable; bodies and trust are commodities
Neglect	God-talk without faithful care; authority without stewardship
Abandonment	People leave when cost appears; love has an exit
Robbery (if modeled or tolerated)	Wanting = taking
Cursing (if modeled)	Speech destroys; bitterness is power

Even with Bible reading at table, the living covenant may teach: words bind others, not me. Treachery passes not always by explicit teaching, but by broken relational order.

C. Where “dishonoring parents” connects

Exodus 20:12 / Deuteronomy 5:16 — honor father and mother.

Deuteronomy 27:16 — cursed is he who dishonors father or mother.

Dishonoring is not only insult. It includes:

- treating parents' teaching as worthless while demanding their resources;
- shaming their name through robbery or cursing;

- reversing roles — child judges, mocks, steals from, or curses those God set above them.

When a child robs or curses others, they often dishonor parents in three ways at once:

1. Shame on the house — the family name bears the fruit (Prov 10:1; 17:25).
2. Nullification of stewardship — “you raised me in vain” weaponized against godly parents.
3. Pride — “I am my own law” (#258 root) — dishonor, because honor recognizes God’s order, not self-rule.

D. Biblical upbringing, treacherous children

Two truths hold together:

1. The child is accountable. Robbery and cursing are not “parent fault only.” They are treachery chosen under covetousness and bitterness — often fed by pride.

2. The whole house can still sit under Treachery’s fruit. Faithful teaching in a home where adultery, neglect, or abandonment occurred (now or in the line) means the child received two voices: Scripture at the table, treachery in the walls.

Neglect can be subtle in “Biblical” homes — truth taught, soul not attended; discipline without tenderness; presence without repentance after sin. That produces the loneliness/emotional brokenness root shared by neglect and abandonment. Lonely, broken children often become robbers (take to fill lack) or cursers (speak to wound back).

IV. One Chain — How the Topics Connect

ADULTERY (covenant broken; appetite + rebellion seated)

↓

NEGLECT (still present, but faithless — chair occupied, duty refused)

↓

ABANDONMENT (presence or covenant withdrawn)

↓

Child inherits: broken trust, loneliness, division

↓

ROBBERY (take by force/stealth — covetousness fills the gap)

↓

CURSING (bitterness speaks — destroys with words)

DISHONORING (pride — child exalts self above parents and God’s order)

All under Principality of Treachery Against Others — Division and Relational Destruction.

V. Summary

The adulterer's mind is a treacherous, self-sovereign mind: it breaks covenant, then rationalizes every further breach — neglect, abandonment, theft, and cursing — because God's law has already been demoted below appetite and control.

Neglect is faithless presence; abandonment is withdrawn presence. Both fracture the same bond from different angles.

Dishonoring parents when children rob or curse is the child's pride expressing the same treachery cluster — but it lands on parents with special force because God joined honor to stewardship. Biblical upbringing can be real and still coexist with a child's treachery; yet adultery and neglect in the line often train the child in the very robbery and cursing that dishonors the parents who taught otherwise.
