G'day and welcome to this podcast. I'm your host Ashton. Today we're going to conclude with the series God's Design. How teenagers and adults should view their sexuality in this modern day and age. Today the world has pushed out a secular message regarding our bodies and also regarding our sexual encounters. The world is saying that it is okay to do whatever you like because it is your body. But they ignore the fact that we have a creator or they choose not to acknowledge the creator of our bodies.

And he has a specific design for us and how we should use our bodies in a covenant relationship that he has laid out for us that will ultimately lead us to his blessings. God's principles will ultimately leave us being satisfied within our relationships. We will have the love and acceptance that we are so desiring in this cold world today. So if you've been following the podcast, you know there were numerous topics that were discussed and numerous scriptures that were provided so that we can educate ourselves and educate the youth about making a conscious choice for following God.

But in this podcast today we are going to deal with the what-if factor. What if I didn't reserve my sexuality? What if I did the things that were outside of the design of God? What if something happened to me that was outside of my own control? How then do we deal with that and move forward? We could be sitting and talking to a body of people, but not everybody is the same. Some may have suffered trauma. Others may have used their bodies incorrectly.

And the message should not be to condemn anybody, but to bring everybody to the forefront of God's blessings that he has for their lives. And so in this podcast we are just going to address some issues that when you are speaking and dealing with people that you can also accommodate such people that are in the group. So I say this because a few years ago I saw a conference that was advertised and I didn't read it properly, but I wanted to go to the conference and I contacted the lady in charge and I said, look, I want to come to the conference.

The conference was about unforgiveness. And so I forced my way basically. And when I got to the conference, it was a woman's conference and there I was the only guy in this woman's conference. So it pays to read the entire post before just following up on things. And so I sat down and the conference carried on. It was a very good conference. It spoke about unforgiveness. And while I was listening, the host of the conference said she was raped and she was raped by 15 men and each guy had his turn and whoever wanted seconds came back for seconds.

And this threw me for a curveball. I just didn't expect hearing this. And while sitting over there, the room went silent and another girl got up and she said, she's told nobody this. She was also raped. And the next woman got up and she said, a family member, she never told anybody. And the next woman and more than 50% of the room that I was in with women all got up and said that there was sex. They were actually assaulted in one way or another by people they knew and people they didn't know.

And they couldn't come out and tell their family members because they felt ashamed about what had happened. And I was stunned. Yes, I was sitting there thinking, I'm in the wrong conference. But the message of unforgiveness and forgiving others touched my heart in that it sent me on a journey to ask for forgiveness where I need to ask for forgiveness. And confront people who I needed to settle issues with in a loving manner, of course. But back to the conference, this really opened my eyes to the fact that we preach such happy, happy messages.

And we tell people all things are new and they must just carry on with their lives and Jesus did it all. We don't realize that people suffer with a lot of trauma and trauma. And sometimes your message can in itself be abusive because it doesn't take into account that somebody sitting there has gone through this particular trauma, trauma. And you're just saying, well, you know, all things are new. But, you know, Paul was saying that I don't hold on to the things of the past, my victories.

I make all things new so I can press forward to the mark. So, you know, we must be careful how we twist scriptures to suit our needs. Now, when dealing with such issues and such matters, we should be open with the young people and the people we are speaking with and let them know whether they have been exposed to pornography and such trauma or molestation and sexual abuse that there is a way God has for them to be restored. So, when we make this conscious decision to serve God and to serve God only, then we are not going to go back to our old ways.

Because Hebrews 10 verse 26 says, if we sin willfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there no longer remains a sacrifice for sins. Verse 29 says that when we do that, we are trampling the Son of God underfoot and counting his blood that was shed as a common thing. And insulting the Spirit of grace, we should take this very seriously, that we are not spurning the grace of God by our own acts, following our own lusts, and not living out the design of God for our lives.

There is a particular saying that says, the trauma you have been through is not your fault, but the healing is your responsibility. So, in true repentance, we then give our lives back to God and we ask God to restore us and every part of us that we have used outside of the design of God. We ask for forgiveness and we confess those sins to him and we ask that those sins now be put on the cross of Jesus, the curses of those be put on the cross of Jesus, and the sins covered under the blood of Jesus.

Isaiah 65, Isaiah 65, verse 7 says, Instead of your shame, you shall have double honor. If you have for some or the other reason been... And if you have for one or the other reason been... Sexually assaulted, molested, now you are carrying that heavy burden of somebody else's shame on you because you never asked for it. It is your responsibility now to fight, to be healed from such a trauma. When you forgive somebody for hurting you, you're not saying that what they did was okay.

But you are saying that I will no longer live my life with such shame hanging over me because I will forgive that person and I will release them to God so God can deal with them and I can move on with my own life. To start our healing journey and our process, we need true repentance and we also need to have forgiveness. Those are always going to be required of us from God. In our Faith Over Fear teachings, it's another podcast that I do, we understand that God responds to faith.

So you need to have faith so God can respond to your faith. And if you need more faith, then remember that faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God so you get yourself involved in hearing the Word of God to increase your faith. You should then meditate on many healing scriptures to help you understand that God's desire is to heal you and restore you. As we previously discussed, your sexual exploits don't only harm yourself, they also harm your future partner.

So it is imperative that God restores you back to the will that He has for your life. So ask the Lord Jesus to come back into your life or ask Him to come into your life and be Lord and Savior over your life. Let Him know that you believe He died on the cross for you and He rose from the dead. And confess everything that He has done for you so far. Romans chapter 10 verse 9 and 10 says, So here are a few steps that the counselor, pastor, youth pastor or yourself if you are addressing a crowd of kids, kids can use, can use.

The first thing you would want to do is ask them if there is somebody that they can speak to, that they have confidence in speaking to and opening up to. Because some of these traumas, people don't speak about them. They hold them inside for years and years and years. Because they don't trust anybody around them to release this information to them. And we have to be that safe space for such people that they can open up and confess, Look, this happened to me and it happened at this particular time and this is how I feel about it.

And giving them that space and opportunity means that the enemy will no longer have a stronghold over their lives. The next step, we should confess our sins and just let our sins be made known. If we continue to hide our sins, God cannot forgive us and He won't forgive us. We have to confess our sins to one another and He is faithful to heal us. Then we also need to forgive ourselves and whoever perpetrated whatever it was against us who broke our hearts.

Injection, the abandonment, we have to forgive ourselves. We made poor decisions, we made poor choices, and we have to release ourselves from those wrong decisions that we made, and we also have to release ourselves from the unforgiveness that we have towards other people who may have hurt us. At this point, some people may need deliverance, some not, but at this point, all your offenses, all your hurts, all your pains, you've got to ask Jesus to come take them and remove them from you, because if you do not remove the offense, then the enemy has a right to come in and set up a camp inside of you.

This will then become a stronghold, but if you give your offenses over to Christ, Christ will pick those offenses up off you and release you and free you from them. The next step is to protect your sexuality. Once you're set free, you can't go back to the fault you were in before. You cannot go wallow in and reminisce of all the things that got you in the problems that you are faced with now. Once you are set free, you've got to set your eyes and your mind on new things.

The old things now must pass away. So you've got to find the company that's going to speak and sow into the godly things that is required for you to keep your purity that Jesus Christ is going to restore unto you. Another area you may have to look at is, what about the people who you were counting on to protect you? What about the people you were counting on to come to your aid when you were in trouble? The unforgiveness you may have towards those people, leadership, for example.

Sometimes you just sit with leadership who have got no clue on how to deal with the issues you have and build up the resentment you have inside of you. This could even be with your parents. So you've got to look at all of the people who are above you in life and who never came to your rescue and also forgive them for their lack of empathy towards your situation or their sheer ignorance that they had towards your situation. This is going to include also getting rid of all anger towards everybody and anybody because if you don't, the spirit of anger is going to come and set up camp inside of you and you will be angry at everybody and you won't know why you are constantly angry.

It's because you haven't released the people who could have helped you, who should have helped you and who hurt you in the first place. I think at this point in time, people should understand that God has given us all a free will and people will choose to harm other people out of their free will that was given to them by God. It's not that God wasn't there, it's not that God didn't see or God didn't know, God knew, God saw what was going to happen to you, but he says, vengeance is mine.

And because he gave these people, he gave us our free will, we have a choice to operate within the design of God and love one another or to operate outside of the design of God. There are consequences for every action, whether they be good consequences or bad consequences, you need to reassure the person who may have suffered a trauma that God loves them and God wants to restore them, that God wants to make them whole again, that they need to let go and let God.

This is going to be the conclusion of the podcast, God's Design. I hope it was an informative podcast and I hope that you can take information from here. Church to the community and share with our young people that God has a design for their bodies and if they are willing to submit to the will of the Father, He has a great plan for their lives. God bless you all.
